GERMAN TRAP FOR ALLIES

King Albert of Belgium Wounded

ALLSTON WOMAN IN TRAGEDY

Mrs. A. Silver Emerson, aged twenty-three years, of No. 1[illegible] Commonwealth avenue, Allston, bride of little over a year, committed suicide today by cutting her throat with a razor in the bathroom of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Gilbert at No. 46 Pearl avenue in the Playstead section of Winthrop, where Mr. and Mrs. Emerson were guests. It is said that she uttered no cry and that the discovery was accidental.

Mrs. Emerson suffered severely from stomach trouble and had been under treatment of a specialist.

A. Silver Emerson, her husband, is a member of the law firm of Hall & Emerson, No. 15 Tremont street.

Mr. Emerson had been greatly worried about his wife's health, but a few days ago said that he thought she was improving.

Mrs. Emerson was formerly Miss Rachel Frank, who lived with her uncle, Max Frank, at No. 104 Pembroke street. Mr. Frank is now at his Summer home in Hull.

After their marriage last year Mr. and Mrs. Emerson set up their home in Allston. Recently they went to Winthrop to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Gilbert on Pearl avenue. The Gilbert house is near the Crest end of the avenue.

Some time before 7 a. m. Mrs. Emerson stole out of her room to the bathroom, clad only in her night dress. She did not look the bathroom door. The next known was when a member of the household, opening the door at 7 o'clock, found Mrs. Emerson dead on the floor.

Consider Plans for $100,000,000 War Tax

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Chairman Underwood and the Democratic members of the ways and means committee today were busy formulating plans to raise the $100,000,000 war tax urged by President Wilson. The leaders in Congress have outlined a program to rush the legislation through and no time will be lost in the enacting of the measure to replenish the national coffers. Although Majority Leader Underwood and his colleagues are reticent as to the form the tax will take, it is known that Democrats on the committee have suggested that the tax be placed on gasoline, railroad tickets and freight, beer and inheritances.

OUIMET LEADS TRAVERS, 1 UP 1ST 18 HOLES

MANCHESTER, Vt., Sept. 5.—Francis Ouimet, former open golf champion, led Jerome D. Travers, title holder, by 1 up in the morning round for the national amateur golf title today.

Ouimet won the morning round by taking the seventeenth and eighteenth holes. Travers finished the first nine holes 2 up, but Ouimet played consistently in the return journey.

No more ideal condition could be imagined than greeted the finalists of the amateur golf championship as they played from the first tee at Ekwanok Country Club this morning at 10 o'clock. The sky was clear and there was scarcely a haze over the

HEROINE SAVES WOMAN FROM DEATH IN BAY

Miss Ella G. Perkins, twenty-four years old, of Bayside road, Squantum, was rescued from drowning in Dorchester Bay by Mrs. Joseph Allen of Dorchester street, Squantum, in whose store Miss Perkins is employed. Both were swimming off the Squantum shore, Miss Perkins being about one-eighth of a mile out and Mrs. Allen thirty yards behind her. Miss Perkins became weak in the rough water and went down. When she came up she screamed. Mrs. Allen plunged forward to her aid. Miss Perkins went down a second time. When she came up again Mrs. Allen had just come abreast of her. By this time Miss Perkins was hardly conscious. Mrs. Allen seized the drowning girl by the hair and managed to throw the helpless form over on her own back.

Mrs. Allen just managed to make the ocean end of the old wharf and to drag Miss Perkins safely upon it. Then assistance came.

MONARCH INJURED AS SHRAPNEL HITS MOTOR

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 5.—A dispatch from Berlin says that King Albert of Belgium was wounded in the hand by a splinter from a shrapnel while leading the Belgian retreat into Antwerp.

According to the Berlin dispatch, the shell exploded against a rear wheel of the automobile in which the King was riding. The machine was wrecked.

ITALY NEAR MOBILIZATION

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The Rome correspondent of the Midi telegraphed today that General Rava had taken command of the Italian troops and that an order for general mobilization is expected at once.

FRENCH MAY BE CUT OFF FROM PARIS

That the Germans have abandoned Paris as their main objective and are pressing a campaign to cut off the allied armies from their base is further confirmed by the following dispatch:

PARIS, Sept. 5 (3:30 P. M.)—The following official announcement has just been made by the military authorities:

"It looks as though the enemy were continuing a large rounding movement, leaving Paris on the right and moving in a southeasterly direction."

Such a movement, sweeping in between Paris and the allies' main battle line, if successful, would entrap the French and British armies and might prove disastrous.

The immense German losses in the campaign in Belgium and France have evidently convinced the Kaiser that the success of his armies must be spared on some bold swift movement.

The London Daily Mail's correspondent at Gisors, a French town near Veauvais, estimates the total losses of the allies at 40,000 and that of the Germans at 200,000. He says a moderate estimate of the German losses places them at 20 per cent. at least.

The English and French armies thus far remain undefeated. The German advance on Paris is not continued. The bombardment of Maubeuge is continued, but the city is holding.

Furious fighting is reported near Verdun. It is reported that the French and Germans engaged in battle yesterday near Altkirch, but the result is unknown.

The Russian War Office announces that 60,000 Austrian soldiers, cut off from the main army, are at bay west of Lemberg. The Russian troops are trying to surround them.

All Austrians and Germans have been notified to leave Paris within forty-eight hours.

The Rome correspondent of the Paris Midi says General Rava has taken command of the Italian troops and mobilization is expected at once.

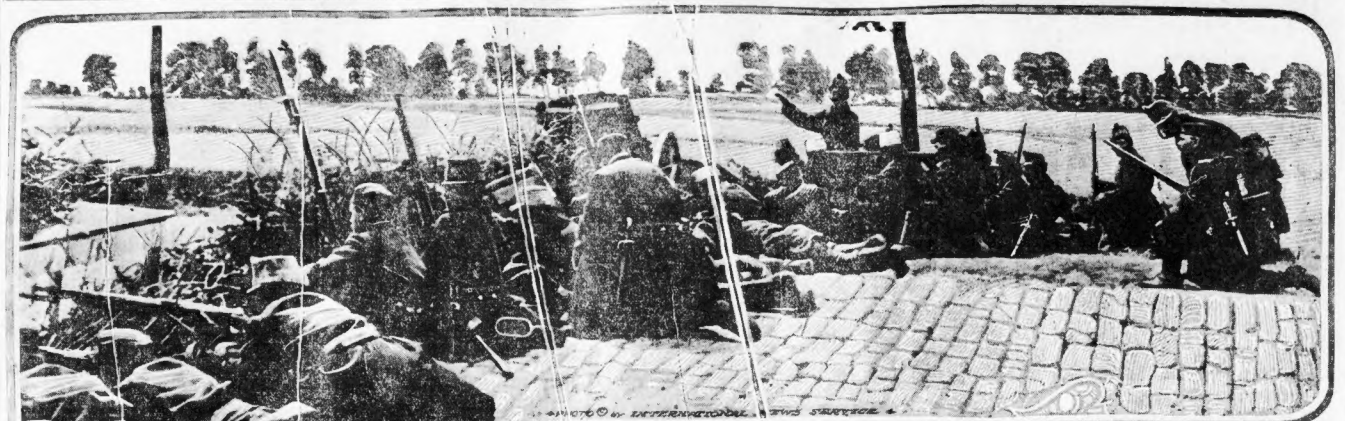
FORCED TO BELGIUM'S DEFENCE

Belgians behind breastworks defending one of the main roads to Louvain and Brussels. The invading army of the Kaiser met with unexpected resistance when they tried to capture the capital. The Belgians, fighting every inch of the way, held the German troops for several days. Their valor has been one of the big features of the war of the Powers.



'It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary,' British War Song

Dispatches from London say that the British troops in the field are singing "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" on their marches through northern France. The tune has a good swing and swells up magnificently from a trudging column of men.

This news recalls how in our Spanish-American war the men sang "There's Be a Hot time In the Old Town Tonight" on every hike.

Another song of the British more popular in camp, is Good-bye, Piccadilly," just as in Cuba, about the camp fires, our men used to raise the tune "Good-by, Dolly Gray."

By LAWRENCE ELSTON, Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The issue in the present war is German militarism, which threatens all western Europe, declares Sir Edward Grey, British Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a letter to his constituents in Berwick, which was made public here today.

"When our sincere and strenuous efforts to prevent a European war failed," said Sir Edward, "we would gladly have stood aside, had it been possible. But we were compelled to make the observation of Belgian neutrality one of the conditions of our own neutrality. The German government asked us to waive that and condone the violation of a solemn pact. There could be but one honorable answer to such a request. Had we sat still and ignored Belgium's appeal we should, indeed, have been despised by all.

"The progress of the war has revealed a terrible, menacing thing—German militarism is. It is the great German militarism that we must fight. The whole of western Europe would fall under it if Germany's youth be successful in this war.

"If, as the result of the war, the independence and integrity of the smaller European States can be secured, and western Europe be liberated from the menace of German militarism and the people of Germany itself be freed from that militarism—for it is not the German people but the Prussian militarism that has driven Germany and Europe into war—if that militarism can be overcome, then, indeed, there will be a brighter, fairer day for Europe, which will compensate us for the awful sacrifice which the war entails."

RUSSIANS REPORTED PLANNING TO MARCH UPON VIENNA NEXT

PETROGRAD (or Petersburg), Sept. 5.—Following the capture of Lemberg, at which a quarter of the Austrian army was wiped out and the control of all Galicia fell into Russian hands, the czar's forces today are reported to be preparing to move on to Vienna.

It is reported here that the Germans have sent to the left flank of the western front twenty-two additional regiments, which seems to indicate plans for serious fighting in a new place, while reinforcements for the eastern front are presumably being taken from the northwest.

Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, has issued a general order providing for the military administration of all foreign territory as fast as it is occupied by the Russian troops.

HOW LEMBERG FELL.

The order calls for the creation of a special province consisting of the territory occupied in Austria-Hungary, and the placing of it under the administration of the commander of the armies operating in the theatre of the war in the southwest.

The Russian General Staff has issued the following account of the fighting which led to the capture of Lemberg, capital of Galicia:

"In the offensive against the Lublin-Kholm front, the main Austrian forces deployed on the Zevieosul-Tarnof-Rudelgrad-Tomaszof and Sokolie line.

"The second Austrian army, composed of the 2d, 11th and 12th Corps and five divisions of cavalry, was ordered in the region east of Lemberg in order to cover this operation.

"When the Russian troops were making the offensive, the Austrian concentration had not been completed, and topographical considerations compelled the enemy to reinforce this army still more with the troops of the 7th, 13th and 14th Corps, thus making a total of twelve divisions and several brigades of the Landsturm.

FIGHT OVER 207 MILES.

"Our troops in the Lonka, Dubno and Proskuroff districts crossed the frontier on August 20 and marched on Lemberg for the purpose of preventing the Austrian army covering movement and acting against the flank of the enemy.

"The offensive was hampered by the numerous affluents of the Dneister River flowing across all the routes. Moreover, the enemy possessed on the Dneister a series of fortifications destined to defend bridges from which they menaced the Russian left flank and communications with Russia.

"In the period between August 17 and September 3 the Russian left wing advanced 220 versts (about 147 miles), fighting all the time.

"The bulk of the hostile forces, intrenched in powerful positions at Kamenka and Galitch, offered battle and were thoroughly defeated in a desperate contest.

"Between August 31 and Sept. 3 in one district of the upper course of the Gnila Lipa River, where the enemy's line was broken, the Austrians lost 7,000 men in killed or wounded.

CZAR TO PUSH ON.

"The retreat of the enemy after his defeat at Lemberg assumed the character of disorderly flight and panic, and the Russians took 200 guns, together with the baggage and tens of thousands of prisoners. It is believed that the remnant of the Second Austrian Army is now no longer of any military value.

"On September 2, when the Russians were drawing up within cannon shot of Lemberg, the surrounding forts did not stop this advance.

"The same day Lemberg was closely surrounded by Russian troops and was captured with enormous quantities of war materials. All the buildings in town were packed with Austrian wounded, who had been abandoned in the enemy's headlong flight.

"Besides the political and military importance of Lemberg as the centre of Galicia, its capture is very important from a strategic point of view, as it constitutes a great railway junction, commanding the lines leading to the rear of the Austrian Army, which is now united in line with Cople, Gismontie and Belz.

"The capture of Lemberg will enable the Russian Army to push forward with still greater intensity."

225 Americans Are Still at Vienna

VIENNA, via Berlin, Rome and Paris, Sept. 5.—The Ministry of War has issued a statement stating that the military operations of the Austro-Hungarian armies were proceeding with success at all points. Despite this, Emperor Francis Joseph keeps in close touch with military affairs. There are still about 225 Americans in Vienna who want to leave and they will be sent out by the American relief committee as soon as possible. A number of Americans are remaining among them several doctors who have volunteered for Red Cross service.

Scots, in War, Sang Lauder Love Ballads

LONDON, Sept. 5.—A corporal and two privates of the Black Watch, the famous Scotch regiment, all wounded, have just arrived in London from the front.

The corporal, telling how his regiment fought, said:

"In the thick of it we were singing Harry Lauder's songs. Among them was 'Twas Grand.' All around us were dead and dying. Every now and then German shells burst, and as we peppered away at 'em we sang 'Roamin' in the Gloamin'" and 'The Lass o' Killiecrankie.'"

STORK ON CAR; WASHINGTON ST. BLOCKED

At 11:30 today there was more excitement on Washington street, between Boylston and Avery streets, than on the boulevards of Paris.

A new girl citizen arrived in Boston, all unexpected and unannounced. While the mother paid her fare—it was on an Ashmont-Milton car—the new arrival paid nothing.

The cause of the big blockade of Washington street was a passenger on the front seat. Other women passengers saw something strange was about to happen just as the car was passing the Bacon department store.

The woman called to the motorman, who, being a sage married man, threw off the current, stopped the car, from which he hurriedly jumped, having first pulled down the front awning.

Everybody looked around for a doctor. Right on the car was seated Dr. J. H. Deveny, of Dorchester, who climbed forward to the front seat, where all the trouble and there he presided over the advent of the latest Bostonian.

While all this was going on, the motorman, the police and others were sending in hurry calls for an ambulance. By the time it dashed up, all clanging and banging, from the Relief Hospital at Haymarket square, the blockade had strung out the length of a line reaching down to the North Station.

The departure of the ambulance with its interesting charges made possible an early resumption of traffic.

At the Relief Hospital it is said both mother and baby girl are doing well. The mother is Mrs. William E. Silvard of No. 127 Harrison avenue.

323 U. S. Refugees on Spanish Liner

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The Spanish liner Infanta Isabel arrived today from Barcelona, Spain, with 323 American refugees. The boat was chartered for them by the American consul at that port and the passengers paid an average price of $150 for passage. Colonel Wilcox, military attaché of the United States embassy at Madrid, and Count Festetics, an Austrian, whose wife is an American, were among the passengers.

TRAINING SHIP BRINGS ELEVEN U. S. REFUGEES

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 5.—The nautical training ship Newport, dropped anchor in Newport harbor at 7:30 today with eleven American refugees aboard, who were taken on at Marseilles August 6. The refugees are:

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Conant, Pawtucket, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Holmes, Providence.

Dr. and Mrs. G. O. Kline, No. 2014 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Charles Maddocks, No. 600 West One Hundred and Eighty-third street, New York.

Mrs. Ellen B. Dumont, No. 1810 Master street, Philadelphia.

Miss E. F. Rogers, No. 250 West Fifty-eighth street, New York.

Misses Josephine and Catherine Maroney of Pawtucket.

Captain James R. Briggs of the Newport said:

"We left Marseilles August 6, taking the refugees aboard here. We arrived at Genoa August 7, Madeira August 15, and sailed from Funchal the 17th. The passage was without incident, except the sighting of an unknown British warship Thursday."

Some of the refugees came ashore for a brief ride about the city, returning soon to the training ship, which sailed at 11 o'clock for Providence. Dr. Rogers of New York said:

"We passed a French warship and four British warships in the Mediterranean. At Toulon we ran into a squadron of twenty-two French warships. The commander of the squadron asked who the American refugees were, where they came from and where they were going, but he did not interfere with our continuing."

JAPAN'S PREMIER URGING WAR MEASURE, THANKS AMERICA

By MERRIT F. PRESTON.

Staff Correspondent Boston American.

Tokio, Sept. 5.—Both houses of the Japanese diet met in special session today to pass legislation for carrying on the war with Germany.

Premier Okuma personally addressed the House of Representatives and presented the war budget framed by the cabinet. He asked its immediate passage.

"The army and navy are doing their full duty," he said, "and the Government looks to you to do the same."

Following the address by the premier, Minister of Foreign Affairs Baron Kato gave to the House of Representatives a resume of conditions that led to the war against Germany. He declared that Japan's assistance had been requested by England, and that it had complied under the terms of the treaty existing between the two Governments.

In the course of his speech the baron thanked the American Government for the manner in which it had protected Japanese subjects and interests, saying:

"I desire to express the sincere appreciation of the Imperial Government to the American Government for the courtesy which it has been good enough to extend Japan in connection with the present trouble and for the protection of Japan's subjects and and interests in Germany and Austria."

GERMAN VICTORY POSSIBLE

ons to cut the allies off from Paris, their base.

The official admission of the French War Office that the Germans had reached La Forte-Sous-Jouarre, thirty-four miles east of Paris, and that the German battle line now reaches south of Rheims, shows that the French and English have fallen back at least forty miles, in a southeasterly direction, from the position which they held between Senlis and Compeigne.

The French War Office statement, which was issued at 10:35 o'clock this morning, made no mention of any fighting and declared the German movements had not succeeded much better than on preceding days.

The lines of the French and their British allies are still intact and the circular movement of the Germans has had the effect of concentrating the forces of the allies into a much more compact formation than they previously maintained.

The Germans paused to the south and east along the western bank of the Aisne River in the Argonne forest, which lies between Rheims and Verdun. The present indications are that the Germans have abandoned for the time being their idea of attacking the fortresses defending Paris and are devoting their entire attention to the main army of the allies. The German army is now stretched out in a mighty semi-circle, which they are apparently striving desperately to close. Beginning at a point near Belfort, where lies the southern German army under General Von Heeringen, the lines stretch northward along the eastern border of France, past Luneville, Nancy, Verdun, Montmedy, Mezieres, Charleville, Mauberge, and there in a westerly and southerly direction along the Aisne toward the Argonne forest.

SURPRISING TACTICS.

Considerable mystery is felt here over the German movements. Throughout the campaign German tactics have proven surprising. The Kaiser's Generals have set a new pace in warfare by the quickness of their movements and their refusal to be halted by fortified places. City after city, containing fortresses of the first and second class, have been passed by the German host. Heavy siege guns were left in the rear and after the invading legions had rolled past the artillery began systematically to batter down the walls of the forts. Such was the case at Liege, at Namur, at Mezieres and Maubeuge.

In its statement today the French War Office said the garrison at Maubeuge is holding out nobly against the terrific bombardment of the Germans.

During the southern movement of the allies a number of British troops were detached from the main body and brought into Paris to help defend the city against the German attack. Their orders declare that the allies fell back from one stronghold to another and they scoff at the idea that the German wedge will be able to make a breach in the allied line.

Heavy reinforcements have reached the allies. French troops from the west and south having passed through Paris for seventy-two hours. The men are full of confidence and all are anxious to get at the enemy.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE WAR.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—A letter from London says the war excitement was not so intense that the London papers did not care to print reports of the Davis cup tennis matches in New York, but the news did not come when it was expected.

Hours went by. Inquiry was greeted with the cable company's files and finally it was discovered that the incoming reports had been held up by the censors because they detected mystery in what they called the "code numbers" following the prisoner names. These "code numbers" were the scores of the sets.

Moreover it was said by the censors, the senders of the dispatches had violated the ethics of censorship by not sending the full names of the players; that "Mc" signifies might be code for some German spy.

KILL MAD SOLDIER.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 5.—The Nieuwe Rotterdam Schee Courant has been advised from the Holland-German frontier that while a body of 1,000 Belgian civil prisoners were being transported to Germany one of them went mad and attacked a soldier who was guarding them.

The soldier's comrades killed the madman with their bayonets, and in the excitement of others of the prisoners were wounded.

WOMAN SEEKS WILSON IN EFFORT FOR PEACE

Mme. Rosika B. Schwimmer of Budapest, Austria, member of the International Peace Council of Women, who arrived in Boston on the Arabic, will call upon President Wilson and ask him to appoint a peace commission to act with a similar body in Norway, to stop the present war.

She is a well known journalist in her own country, but now is to the war has been obliged to cease publishing the newspaper with which she is connected.

"We must do something to stop the war," said Mme. Schwimmer. "People have such a terrible will spirit. They are fighting till their last breath. In districts which I well know there is not a male inhabitant over twelve years.

"It is perfectly dreadful. The ravages of the war are simply terrible. Everyone seems to be pessimistic. They don't care what becomes of them, they are bloodythirsty. I never expected to hear such things as I've heard recently about the horrors of the war. It must stop.

"I plead with Americans to help in my mission of intercession. I am going to see President Wilson to ask him to send a peace commission to confer with the Norway peace commission. Then let them plead with the governments at war. This commission will ask for a truce.

"Norway celebrates this year the centenary of peace. She will value this appeal of the United States in asking for peace. Let every woman in the land use her energies to obtain this grand end.

"You do not know what this war has done. You haven't any idea of what devastation it has brought already. It must be stopped, and we believe the United States can do this better than any other nation, so I have come to this country to plead with your President in this way."

AUSTRIAN ARMY OF 80,000 IN RUSSIAN TRAP NEAR LEMBERG

PETROGRAD, St. Petersburg, Sept. 5.—Two corps (80,000 men) of the Austrian army defeated east of Lemberg, have been cut off from the main forces, according to the Rivet Sat, and are at bay in the hills surrounding Grodek, fifteen miles west of Lemberg, according to an official report received at the War Office today from the front.

Though the Russian capital is jubilant over the capture of Lemberg, the members of the general staff declare that the defeat of the Austrians, near Zamost was of greater advantage to the success of the Russian arms than the fall of the Galician capital.

With the Austrians retreating southward from Zamost and the vicinity of Lublin, the way has been cleared, in part at least, for the Russian advance onward Posen, which is on the shortest route to Berlin.

BUYERS FOR BIG BOSTON HOUSES TELL OF WAR SCENES ABROAD

The eagerness of the French to mobilize is described by P. A. O'Connell, who has just returned from Paris. Mr. O'Connell, who is president of the E. T. Slattery Company, says that one Parisian he knew was ordered to report on the twenty-first day of mobilization. He has not enlisted, he reported on the ninth day, but was told he could not be taken there was such a rush of men.

Mr. O'Connell says he was the last person to get out of Paris. He brought some of his purchases as baggage. He saw a German store smashed by a mob. The goods were piled in the street and burned. Mr. O'Connell describes the French capital as he last saw it as like Boston on a Sunday. He says:

"All the small shops are open, but they are doing no business. All their men have gone into the army. The small shops, except those that deal in food supplies and kindred necessaries, are closed. In the provision stores women have taken the place of men.

"Everywhere able-bodied men are going into the army. Every one of them has a book that tells him where and when he must report for duty.

"The wholesale houses in Paris are still open, but find their business cut off."

George H. Guest of Melrose, buyer for the Jordan Marsh Company, was in St. Petersburg—or Petrograd, as the Russians now call it—when the Czar read his war message from the Winter Palace balcony. Mr. Guest says:

"I should think there were 30,000 persons in the street. When the Czar appeared on the balcony there was tremendous cheering and all knelt. When he began to speak his voice was drowned in cheers. He could only make signs until the noise subsided.

"I left Russia on a military train, went through Finland and reached Sweden after the crowding voyage. When the boat entered the harbor of Stockholm all passengers were put in the hold. The captain feared harbor mines. We were momentarily expecting to be blown up."

Mr. O'Connell and Mr Guest both caught the Cedric at Liverpool.

The Maxim Silencer in War

The Maxim Silencer, invented by Hiram Perry Maxim of Hartford, Ct., is expected by American military experts to demonstrate its usefulness in this European war.

Its value has been the subject of much experiment, but thus far it is not accepted as a valuable adjunct. It is in the position occupied by Maxim machine guns before the battle of Khartoum. They were held as pretty toys, but it was argued impossible to supply them with ammunition.

But at Khartoum, a tremendous force of mounted Egyptians, charging in a little squad of Englishmen, were cut to pieces by Maxim machine guns, and the new weapon established itself.

In like fashion, American army men believe the silencer will be accepted after this war. Certainly the new invention will be given a thorough trial in modern battles.

Each of the nations now at war has Maxim silencers in small numbers. So much is known. But it is probable that the characteristic thoroughness of the Germans, if not of the other countries, has led them to develop the invention, or perhaps even pirate it for their own use; and the Germans or other armies may have tremendous stocks of these little devices on hand with their other secret weapons which are beginning to make themselves felt.

Young Maxim is confident the worth of his invention will be developed; and it is curious to see it occupying the same position his father's gun occupied before Khartoum.

FACTS DEVELOPED.

The elaborate field trials of the Maxim silencer have developed certain facts. The official reports list many advantages gained from its use.

One peculiar aspect is the fact that the muffled noise of firing allows the commanding officer's voice to be more easily distinguished by his troops. At present it is often extremely difficult for the officers in charge of men in trenches, for instance, to communicate to them the proper range and firing orders. It is said that with Maxim silencers an officer's voice is easily heard by a whole company of men firing continuously.

Another aspect is the saving on the soldier's nerves. The silencer, abolishing the terrible noise which at large produced deafness in many troops, saves a tremendous amount of nervous wear and tear, in the opinion of experts, and for this use alone would justify its existence.

Furthermore, the silencer neutralizes the recoil of the gun, so that each shot means a gentle push instead of a sharp blow on the soldier's shoulder. This not only saves nervous strain, but conduces to better marksmanship. For the chief enemy of good shooting at present is said to be the sharp recoil. The jolt throws up the muzzle of the gun, while the soldier instinctively flinches as he pulls the trigger. In view of the long range of modern fire, such good aim is demanded that these small matters are of tremendous advantage. The development of infantry fire is held the most vital feature of modern warfare, and every means is calculated to increase the accuracy of infantry fire is adopted by the army leaders.

The combined good effects of the abolishment of noise and of recoil, it is said, so guard the soldier's nerves that he is capable of more endurance and is far less susceptible to panics on the field of battle.

STRATEGIC ADVANTAGES.

These advantages of the silencer are from the point of view of the individual soldier. But the strategic advantages may under certain circumstances be enormous. The silencer not only prevents the noise of discharge, but it abolishes the flash. Thus, even at night, it is extremely difficult, if not impossible, for an opposing army to locate the spot from which the fire comes.

The advantage might be utilized in many ways. When it is remembered how the smokeless powder of the Spaniards baffled our troops in the Spanish war, some idea can be gained of the advantage of this new invention. In conceivable cases a marching army might be attacked from every side, be under infantry fire from troops ahead and on either flank without being able to see or hear anything that would locate the attackers.

The Maxim Silencer, like the airship, the aeroplane and the submarine, is an invention whose value only actual fighting can determine.

BOSTON NURSES SAIL MONDAY ON RED CROSS SHIP

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The list of trained nurses who will sail on the Red Cross ship Hamburg on Monday has been completed. They include nurses from this city, Washington, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Rochester, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago and New Jersey.

The nurses assembled yesterday afternoon at the Red Cross headquarters. It is a very pretty company that will go to work in the crowded hospitals of the war zone.

Miss Helen Scott May will act as general superintendent, assisted by Miss Katrina E. Hertzer and Miss J. Beatrice Bowman. The nurses and doctors will be divided up into units, each unit including a medical director, two assistants, a supervising nurse and eleven nurses.

There will be two units each assigned to Russia, Germany and England. Belgium and Austria have one each. A ship will sail on Tuesday carrying the Servian unit, which will go to Greece.

The following women are serving from Boston:

Miss Donna G. Burgar, supervisor; Margaret A. C. Hickey, Mabelle S. Walsh, Louise A. Bennett, M. T. Carthy, A. A. Carney, Katherine J. Ulmer, E. V. Rhind, A. S. Barclay, Grace K. Perkins and Frances B. Latimer.

After Antwerp and Paris at Any Cost

PARIS, Sept. 5.—A dispatch from the Antwerp correspondent of the petit Parisien quotes a German officer, who had been taken prisoner, as follows:

"We will sacrifice two, three, four hundred thousand men if necessary, but we will take Antwerp. We took Namur so we will take it."

The correspondent also says that several persons were killed by a Zeppelin fleet that passed over Antwerp Thursday.

PERSONALITIES IN THE GREAT WAR

OSCAR STRAUS, former Minister to Turkey, was in London and saw the Russian troops being rushed through England to Belgium.

PROFESSOR THOMAS MASARYK, member of the Austrian Parliament, for whose safety there has been anxiety among friends here since his accusation was reported, is safe, according to the American consul at Prague.

THE CZAR says he will levy an enormous war tax on Prussia, and force the Kaiser to pay back all he extorts from Belgium.

DR. AMOS F. WILDER, long an official in the Far East and Asia returned, says: "Well wishers of Japan are hoping she will not lose her head . . . Japan is weak and needs us, and she will royalty repay friendship."

GABRIEL HANOTAUX, writing for the Paris Figaro, pays a high tribute to Ambassador Herrick as "a man of just spirit and noble soul."

WILLIAM K. WARD, milk inspector and sealer of weights and measures of Brookline, was arrested as a spy in Nova Scotia, but identified himself and was released.

LOUIS A. FROTHINGHAM from Berlin writes praising the courteous treatment given Americans in Germany since the war broke out.

P. A. O'CONNELL, president of the E. T. Slattery Company, just back from Paris, says the French capital after war was declared was "like Boston on a Sunday."

GEORGE H. GUEST, of Melrose, a buyer for Jordan Marsh, was in St. Petersburg when war broke out and heard the Czar read his war message to the people.

BENEDICT TO STRIVE FOR PEACE

By BRIXTON D. ALLAIRE.

ROME, Sept. 5. — "Constructive statesmanship" is to mark the pontifical regime of Pope Benedict XV. Immediately after his coronation he will take steps expected to enter actively into a program which will be felt strongly wherever the Roman Catholic Church exists.

The official announcement that Cardinal Dominic Ferrata, a candidate for the papacy, will be the next papal secretary of state, succeeding Cardinal Gasparri, has in which the new program of the Vatican for he is an ultra diplomat. It is expected that the influence of the Vatican will be exerted to restore peace in Europe and stop the slaughter which is now going on.

Cardinal Ferrata is sixty-seven years old and was formerly papal nuncio at Berne, Brussels and Paris. In Switzerland he was successful in putting an end to the dissension which up to that time had embittered the relations between the church and the State. During his stay in Paris, hostilities of the French Government against what it denounced as Clericalism were suspended.

Interest now centers in the coronation of the Pope, an event which will have its brilliance marred this year by the war. The function of coronation ordinarily consumes five hours and is marked by solemn and impressive rites, which date back five centuries. Coronation ceremonies take place ordinarily in St. Peters owing to the large number of persons demanding admission, but Leo XIII received the crown in the Sistine chapel.

WELLESLEY GIRLS HOME ON OIL TANK SHIP

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Forced to return to this country on an oil tank steamer because no passenger liners were at Genoa two Wellesley College teachers and twelve students arrived here today on the Italian tanker Lampo. All were well with the exception of Miss Margaret Hinds of Honolulu, who was threatened with appendicitis and was rushed from quarantine to this city on a tug and taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

DANA HALL GIRLS.

The girls in the party were Misses Doris E. Hall, North Willington, Ct.; Anne Poucher, Spokane; Florence Rhodes, Seattle; Mary Corbin, Spokane; Helen Harden, Wheeling; Mona and Mira Thomas, Honolulu; Eva and Maud Hinds, Berkeley, Cal.; Charlotte Bennett, Tacoma; Mary June and Ethelyn Twohy, Spokane.

The girls made fudge in squads in relays from the time the ship left Genos on August 19 until she arrived at quarantine. Neither officers nor crew could refuse fudge when offered by the fair cooks, and while First Officer Agnew declares he would die rather than injure the American girls' reputations as candy makers, he says his ship's medicine chest has received more demands this voyage than any other that he has experienced.

Landing at Naples the party went to Austria and were at the Grand Hotel, Contina, on July 28. Austrian mobilization was in progress at that time, said Miss Reuche, and that evening the girls attended a ball at the hotel. Most of the men present were young Austrian officers in uniform and at the ball it was announced that the troops were to march at midnight for a destination unknown to them. At midnight the dance music suddenly ceased, the orchestra swung into the Austrian national air and the officers left for the front.

HAD NICE OF SHIP.

The party then went to Lake Como, where on August 3 they found themselves unable to cash drafts and utilize funds. As one of the young women said, "We were just plain broke." We were able to get to Milan and there Albert Von Hartle, representative of the Standard Oil Company, took up their case. He communicated with Ambassador Page, who in turn cabled to Washington. Permission was obtained for them to sail on the Lampo which, under the shipping laws, was forbidden to carry passengers.

The ship's officers gave up their quarters to the young women and they started home.

"They made life interesting for us at any rate," said Captain Luigi. "When they weren't driving my cook crazy they were demoralizing the crew by helping polish the brass work."

Captain Luigi gave the girls the run of the ship. They spent much time on the bridge and he says he believes one or two of the mathematically inclined could navigate a ship in a pinch.

OUIMET AND TRAVERS MEET TODAY IN FINAL GAMES FOR GOLFING TITLE

FRANKIE MACK IN COME BACK BOUT TUESDAY

By JACK CONWAY.

FRANKIE MACK, the clever Beach-mont lightweight, will receive a chance to get in line for a battle for the New England lightweight championship when he meets Walter Mohr of Brooklyn in one of the star bouts at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. Mack is one of the best 133-pound boxers that has been developed in this section of the country during the past few years, but he has been unfortunate enough to stumble when ever he has been within striking distance of an important match.

Mack was going along merrily this Summer and it looked as though he would be signed to exchange blows with Matty Baldwin, Eddie Murphy or Gilbert Gallant. Leo Flynn then matched Mack for a tussle with Charley Beyers. On paper it looked as though Mack would win as he pleased. Beyers, however, upset the "dope" and held the Beachmont boy to a draw. He also dropped Frankie for the count of nine in the third frame.

If Mack should win from Mohr he will be in a splendid position to talk business with the best lightweights in these parts, as the Brooklyn boxer has already given Eddie Murphy two hard battles, while he defeated Beyers.

JOHNNY "YOUNG" LUSTIG is another young man who believes he is able to hold his own with the pick of the New England lightweights. Lustig is a fast, two-handed fighter and has met the majority of the leading lightweights in the East. Lustig surprised the wise men recently when he held Matty Baldwin to a twelve-round draw at Manchester, N. H. It was believed that Baldwin would win from Lustig easily, but the New Yorker carried him along at a fast clip, and honors were even Stephen when hostilities ceased.

Lustig will meet a husky opponent Tuesday evening, as he is booked to exchange broadsides with Terry Brooks. These boys have already met once in a local ring. The contest was staged before the University Club in Cambridge and Brooks had the best of the going in a slight margin. He also scored a knockdown.

CONSIDERABLE interest is also being shown in the bout between Joe Chick of Gloucester and Johnny "Kid" Alberts, the New Jersey welterweight. Both men have won fame as sweet punchers and should furnish the "fans" with plenty of action.

The other tussle will bring together Joe Farren of East Boston had Jack Palmer, who hails from New York.

EDDIE MURPHY of Charlestown says that the bout between Matty Baldwin and Eddie Murphy, the South Boston boxer, was fought at 135 pounds. As Eddie claims Murphy reduced to 134½ pounds, which was the weight at "fans" Dahlstrom's men agreed to make. In discussing the matter today Baldwin's manager said:

"I believed that Baldwin and Murphy were to make 134½ pounds for their match. Matty was under weight when he stepped on to the scales.

"When Murphy was asked to weigh, he asserted that he had agreed to fight at 135 pounds. This is the best weight, and when the match was made I demanded that Murphy make 134½ pounds, as I figured that it would worry him to take off the extra poundage.

"EDDIE, however, said that he would not make the weight unless the beam was placed at 135 pounds. His request was finally granted by the club officials, and the beam barely moved. I still held out for 134½ pounds, but Murphy declared he was under the weight, and to prove it he said he would get on the scales. The beam was manipulated so quickly that I was unable to make certain whether Eddie was under the required poundage. Personally I think he weighed all of 135 pounds.

"BALDWIN would have fought Murphy even if the latter weighed 138 pounds, but I was merely trying to get fair play for the Hunker Hill welterweight. Matty is fighting better than ever and is capable of holding his own with the best men in his class. I would never let a match him for a whirl with Charley White, Leach Cross or Joe Gans. It is about time that New England's premier 133-pound boxer were pitted against one of the real stars in the boxing division. Matty will reduce to the 133-pound limit for any of these boys, while he is willing to make even a lower poundage for a fussy battler like Kilbane, the featherweight champion."

WILLIE BEECHER is a confident young man. The clean-cut little New York lightweight is certain that he will win from Joe Rivers in their twenty-round bout, which will be staged at Vernon on Labor Day. Here is how Beecher sizes up the situation:

"I think I can beat Rivers. I am a natural twenty-round man. In my ten-round bouts with Ertle Brenton and Duffy I had all of these boys so worn at the finish that they could not possibly have gone for another ten rounds.

"That's why I moved out to California. I honestly believe that I can wear down any living 133-pounder in twenty rounds. I have had no rest a fancy boxer. I start the heavy stuff in the first round and keep it up until I get results. Rivers is a beautiful boxer, but Joe is not rugged. He fades before steady punching, and that's where I figure to defeat him. I have never been knocked off my feet yet. Rivers can hardly hope to drop me when bigger and better men than he have tried and failed. I am lucky to get the match. That's the way I look at it."

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

SOME doings down in Philadelphia evidently. A very hard fought game was finally won by the Braves, 6 to 5, in twelve innings.

This shows, if there are any timid ones around these parts, that the Boston National League team is game. With the result of the Giants-Brooklyn battle staring at them from the score board, telling the news of the Giants' victory, there were trying moments for Stallings' men and the fact that they beat out the Phillies proves beyond a doubt that they have the stamina to keep right on to the end.

THERE were no signs of the "cracking" that McGraw and Mathewson have predicted. It was a fine game for the Braves to win and will make the series with the Giants which starts here in Boston on Monday all the more exciting.

IT will be noted that the Giants did not have an easy task in beating Brooklyn, but they won by a margin of a run.

All of which leaves the Giants half a game to the good over the Braves. Today's battles in Philadelphia and Brooklyn may bring about a change in the standing, but no matter what happens in those cities the Boston fans will jam Fenway Park on Labor Day, weather permitting.

THE Red Sox have now won six straight games from the Athletics. That is at least one team in the American League that isn't scared to death when the Mackmen come on the field. If the other six teams had put up the fight against the Champs that the Red Sox have put up the American League race would be considerably more exciting than it is at present.

STILL the Red Sox gained another full game on the leaders, but they are still 9½ games behind them. After today's windup at Fenway Park both teams go away, but they come together again at Philadelphia on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week. If our fellows keep up their winning streak against the leaders there may be some fun in the American League before the season closes after all.

EDDIE COLLINS was back in the game yesterday, but he only played part of the matinee. Connie Mack is taking no chances with his star second-sacker's ankle.

WE may get the Great Indian Chief in the battle this afternoon. Bender has not pitched a full game against the Red Sox here this season. He has had one of his best years and seems just as good as he ever was.

OWING to the closeness of the National League race financial adversity has been turned into prosperity. Enormous crowds have been patronizing the games at St. Louis and Chicago in the West, while bumper crowds will visit the Polo Grounds in New York and Boston for the closing days of the season. The second division clubs will participate in the golden harvest, so that it is believed that all the magnates will make money this year.

IN the American League the conditions are not so rosy from a financial standpoint. The runaway race of the Athletics took the edge off things. If the race was as tight in Ban Johnson's circuit as it is in the National League it is likely that it would be a record year for the national game in the United States. European war and the war made on organized Ball by the Federal League, last Sunday the largest crowd that ever saw a National League ball game in Boston, by actual count when the Braves and Cards lines up. The actual paid attendance was more than 25,000.

DOC ANDERSON, the North Carolina dentist who was with the Red Sox off and on for two or three years and finally joined the Federal League forces, has proved, next to Russell Ford, to be the most effective pitcher of the Buffeds.

Anderson comes very close to holding the world's pitching record. In 1909, his first year he played professional ball, he pitched 69 consecutive innings without allowing a score—a feat that entitles him to a niche in the baseball hall of fame. He was then a member of the Wilson, N. C., team of the Carolina State League.

M. ANGELO DONLIN, who has the old Duke Farrell habit of carrying a cane, joins to the belief that the Braves are counterfeits.

"I want to say that Boston hasn't the class," declared Mike, "and just as soon as they get into first place they'll start coming back. The Giants are the class of the league and right now the only club we fear is the Cardinals. We have more games to play than St. Louis and I think we will win out."

ANY one who is contemplating writing a biography of Richard Rudolph, pitcher of the Boston Braves, would get well started in the composing room of a Park Row newspaper in New York. There he will find a man who can furnish data for a work of anything from ten volumes to twenty.

If, however, the inquirer is seeking material for a mere biography of a few thousand words, he had best beware of tapping this font of Rudolphia, for the possessor of the information is the father of Dick Rudolph, and without doubt one of the most violent baseball fans in the country.

FOR the asking, and sometimes even without that formality, he will tell the number of batsmen Dick has struck out this season, the errors which were responsible for his defeats, the hits which were unjustly charged against him, his height, weight and favorite breakfast food. Mr. Rudolph, Sr., will talk just as long as anybody will listen; perhaps a little longer.

And why not? Is there any other man in New York whose son has won eleven straight games in the National League?

DICK HOBLITZELL, who is now playing a great game at first for the Red Sox and leading the American League in hitting, has written a letter to a friend in Cincinnati, where he formerly played ball, in which he says:

"Herzog thought my legs were going back on me, and that my batting slump would be permanent. Luck has turned for me though; my under-pinning seems as strong as ever, and I never hit so well in my life. Sorry that Mollwitz got hurt—he is a fine fellow and the making of a good ballplayer. Hope the Reds win out next year—we will in our league, and there is enough great stuff to come home as a contestant in a world's championship series."

OUIMET SECURES EARLY LEAD IN TITLE PLAY WITH TRAVERS

face of the mounts which rise from the very boundaries of the course and give it its famous scenic grandeur.

Jerome Travers, famed because of being four times champion and the present title holder, had the honor at the start. Francis Ouimet, his worthy opponent, the leader of the Boston golfers, is no less a golf star, although his prominence has been earned largely within about one year.

GREAT CROWD AT MATCH.

Ouimet's chief prominence dates from the winning of the open championship in 1913 after it looked certain to go abroad. Travers put the Bostonian out of the running in last year's championship in the second round and a very short time later Ouimet retaliated by defeating the Metropolitan leader in the Leslie cup matches at Brookline.

Each player had a large following in the gallery which numbered thousands today and a big match never started with more uncertainty existing as to the probable outcome.

Getting away with a pair of perfect drives honors were even between Travers and Ouimet until the latter just cleared the cup and missed his four and the title holder was one up. At the second Ouimet held the lead by a short margin, but both men were well on the green in two and par fours resulted. At the third Travers barely missed the ditch on his second but was down in four for a half Ouimet making a good offer for a three.

The Bostonian played a half mid-iron from the fourth tee and was short, with Travers well on with a digger. Approaches to the pin left Ouimet slightly away and he missed a putt of five feet for a three and became two down.

Ouimet threw a chance away at the fifth, when Travers hooked his second to the rough at the left of the green and took two more to get out, but for the third time in five holes the Bostonian missed an easy putt, and the hole was halved in five.

The sixth drew a pair of pin threes, and although Travers was in the rough on his second at the long seventh, Ouimet was away on the green playing four. They were both down in par fives.

TRAVERS IN THE LEAD.

A long drive and accurate approaches at the next gave Ouimet a chance for a three. The putt was longer than those he had been missing, but his followers were reassured when he made his three with his opponent on the lip of the cup playing the odd. Travers bunkered his rough in the ninth and his second fell in heavy rough at the left of the green. He approached very dead and Ouimet, who was well on in two, putted like a beginning and lost the hole. Travers was two up at the turn.

Although it was reported that Gilman Tillany would caddy for Travers and F. H. Hoyt of Outlet, both played the round with Eiwanok caddies who have been with them for the week.

The cards for the first nine holes:

Ouimet..... 5 4 4 4 5 2 5 3 5—36
Travers..... 4 4 4 3 5 3 5 4 4—36

Had Ouimet putted with ordinary accuracy he would have been two up instead of two down at the turn. A drive and iron put Travers well on the 500-yard tenth, while Ouimet was short of the green. After a drive and a spoon, but approaching within fifteen feet, holed a four and won the hole for the first time this morning.

OUIMET MISSES PUTT.

Travers putted three. Ouimet missed another putt for a half at the eleventh after pitching short of the traps in too heavy sand and playing his second up for a seven-foot putt, and became for the second time two down. Again at the twelfth Ouimet seemed unable to hole out after having a decided advantage at the green. Travers had three legitimate putts, considering the way he must allow for the slope, but Ouimet took as many, and the hole was halved in five.

The Woodland star was brilliant at the thirteenth, laying a cleek from the tee he left himself twenty feet for a two, which he holed, while Travers sliced to a trap and was twenty feet away, playing three.

A half stymie spoiled Ouimet's chances for a win at the next and it was halved in four. Travers made a good offer for a three at the fifteenth, but only saved a half when Ouimet approached over and made a redeeming putt of ten feet for a four.

Each reached the 420-yard sixteenth well in two, with Travers away. A pair of fours resulted. The match was squared at the seventeenth when the title-holder hooked his drive into the mounds at the left and was obliged to play safe, as the ball lay imbedded in the sod, while Ouimet placed the hole perfectly.

Travers erred in judgment on the last hole after driving into the pit at the right, and his attempt to get a carry from the trap failed completely and he played his third safe and his fourth just short of the green before Ouimet played two. Ouimet was within twenty feet of the cup on his second; an attempt to hole out from off the green failed. Travers conceded the hole, leaving Ouimet one up for the morning.

Ouimet— 4 4 5 2 4 4 4 4—35—71
Travers— 5 3 5 4 4 4 4 5 6—40—76

BRAVES HOPE TO COME HOME IN FIRST PLACE

WHAT MAY HAPPEN TODAY.

If the Braves win and the Giants lose two, the Braves will be in first place, a full game ahead of New York.

If the Braves win and the Giants win two, the Giants will lead the Braves by a full game.

If the Braves win and the Giants break even, the two teams will be tied for the lead.

If the Braves lose and the Giants lose twice, the pair will be tied.

If the Braves lose and the Giants break even, the Giants will lead the Braves by a full game.

If the Braves lose and the Giants win twice, the Giants will lead the Braves by two games.

By NICK FLATELY.

With a chance to get back to that dear first place for the welcome that awaits them here in Boston Monday morning, the Braves end their second sensational road trip in Philadelphia this afternoon.

Either Dick Rudolph or Lefty Tyler will, unless all signs fail, be called out to try and hold the Climbers up where a morning win Labor Day will put them in position to entertain in the afternoon from the proud heights of the front.

Rudolph appears the most likely selection of the pair, because if he is used, Lefty, always a Giant Nemesis, will be fit to open against the Giants Monday, while Little Dick can be depended on for a comeback in the closing session with the McGraw's Tuesday.

Big Bill James, unexpectedly shot in yesterday, and consequently the proud possessor of another victory will have two days to rest in and be ready to face New York Monday afternoon. That's a long, long rest for "Tireless Bill" these days.

The fact that Stallings used him yesterday shows full well that the Brave boss has one thing planned at present—to get out in front again; then let the future take care of itself. Bill pitched Wednesday, though he didn't have to work very hard, and might naturally have been expecting a layoff. However, he's young and strong and is thriving on hard work.

As both leading teams won yesterday, that old half game gap still exists. With the Giants playing double this afternoon, the Braves have two opportunities to go into a tie for the lead and a chance to take the front with none to share the glory thereof.

If they can win and the Dodgers put down the Giants twice, the front will be captured. If they win and the Giants break even, or if they lose and the Giants drop a couple, the pair will be tied again.

Nor do the Giants chances for a cleanup look any too bright. Mathewson and Tesreau, the winners of the staff, worked in Thursday's doubleheader. Marquard, who lost his last seven times out, pitched Wednesday and consequently will not be any too anxious to work again. Nevertheless he will probably be put in one of the games, with the unreliable Demaree for the other, so perhaps the Braves will come home at the head of the line.

ROYAL GREETING SURE.

Whether they do or not, will have no effect on the crowd that will be out to welcome them, however.

Monday morning bright and early, thousands and thousands of baseball crazy fans will jam Fenway Park to look the Stallings heroes over, the matter of schedule having prevented that highly exciting pastime for the past several weeks.

Even though defeated today, the stout hearted Braves will have a chance to make things even Stephen Monday if they twice turn back the champion Giants. They'll do it, too, if big crowds and plenty of encouragement will help them along any, for by all known signs, one of the largest assemblages of fans in all the long history of the game will be recorded if the weather on the holiday is favorable.

Just now the Climbers rest only a half game from the fore. The Giants, playing twice today can win both, while the Braves are being beaten, and still Monday night, with fortune smiling, the sensations will be tied up in the lead.

STRONG FOR FINAL RUSH.

If they come home peeled on the pinnacle, or at least even up with the McGraw outfit, the game well known evening can see them out in front, with a fairly good lead—just about enough to have them prime for a rush that will pull them away from all immediate danger.

For the stretch down to the wire, unless that crack so often predicted by those noted authors, McGraw and Mathewson, hits the Braves, the chance of the breaks seems to favor the contenders.

To begin with, the Braves appear much better fortified for the flock of double-headers ahead than do the Giants. McGraw's three pitching stars have all showed signs of overwork and the pace they will have to hold to keep the champions of other days in the race is not going to help them any.

BRAVE ROOKIES BEST.

The Brave trio of first water hurlers have likewise been called on to work more often than is the lot of most pitchers nowadays, but the three of them are regular infants compared to Matty, much craftier than Rube Marquard and better fitted to hold up under hard pressure, and just as strong and a lot more brainy than Jeff Tesreau.

Getting away from the three big guns on each outfit, the second string performers of the Braves look a lot more promising than do McGraw's rescue artists.

Crutcher, Strand, Hess, Cocrehan and Davis have all displayed plenty of class in their latter performances, which same can hardly be said for Demaree or Fromme of the Giants. Marty O'Toole, the new arrival on the staff, never showed much class with the Pirates, and a shift to a team that is crabbing as the Giants are generally reported to be just about now, is not likely to wipe out his one great fault—a disposition to go wild.

MANY DOUBLE-HEADERS.

That McGraw has no confidence in any of the youngsters on the roster has been shown full well by the fact that even when the team was in the middle of its long losing streak, Napoleon never was willing to chance a rookie, though no youngster could have performed worse than did most of the regulars.

In all, for the rest of the season the Braves have six double-headers listed, while the Giants have seven. The youth of the Braves pitchers are not very likely to be

Bender Mourns Loss of Baseball Trophy

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Chief Bender of the Athletics is mourning the loss of his 1913 world series watch; together with the fob which had attached to it, the button given the baseball champions in 1911, and a Masonic emblem. He does not know whether the watch was stolen or lost.

The fact that the watch and fob are so closely connected with Bender's career on the diamond makes the loss all the more keenly felt.

Glaze Is Teaching Football on Coast

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5.—Ralph Glaze, the former Dartmouth athlete and Red Sox pitcher, is teaching football at the University of Southern California.

Because many of the men have not played the American brand of football in several years, Glaze does not know just how the squad will stack up. He expects to get a good line on his material in the next few weeks.

Coffroth Gives Up White-Murphy Bout

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—It looks very probable as if the proposed match here this month between Charley White and Tommy Murphy is off. Promoter Coffroth has been too busy with other affairs to carry on negotiations, that were reopened when Murphy expressed a willingness to step back into the ring again.

New Pirate Pitchers.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5.—Two more pitchers have been added to the list of players purchased by the Pirates. They are Carl (Buck) Hiersen, a left-hander, and Jimmy Vance, a right-hander, and both come from the St. Louis (Mo.) club of the Western League.

should be a wonderful asset before the long season is over and done.

Then again the spirit and enthusiasm of the Braves, a lot of youngsters to whom a chance to win a pennant has not lost its novelty, will stand in good stead.

With the Giants now it's a case of trying to hold their own against an opposition that has not been shaken in two months of desparate battling.

With the Braves it's a case of fight for a lot of glory, with no great disgrace attached even though they finally do get beaten out. Which they will not do today.

Javelin throw—127 ft. 10 in., Francis O'Hara, 1913.

Several records are slated to go by the boards at the New England A. A. U. track and field championships at the Rockingham Park this day, with every athlete of prominence in New England entered in one or more of the seventeen events on the schedule.

Charlie Rice, the New England intercollegiate champion; H. H. Stewart, intercollegiate champion running under the colors of the B. A. A.; Billy Meanix and Irving Howe will run in the century, and all are capable of turning in even time for the distance. Practically the same field is entered in the 220-yard dash.

Tom Halpin, champion and record holder for the 440-yard event, is picked to repeat his performance of last year. Halpin will meet a fast field in Higgins, Mahoney and ons or two other stars.

HALF-MILE A FEATURE.

The half-mile event is expected to be one of the features races of the day, with Norman Taber of the B. A. A. being the favorite to finish in the lead.

Joe Higgins of the Irish-American A. A. has been turning in good time for the 880-yard distance this season, and he is picked to give the former Brown champion a hard tussle for the title.

Jimmy Power of the B. A. A. is the favorite in the mile title. Phil McGrath of the B. A. A. and Fred Brown of the Irish-Americans are also strong performers at this distance and should push Fowers into performing near to the record figures.

The field events are attracting more attention this year than ever before, and one or two New England records are expected to be hung up. Larry Whitney, the former star athlete of Dartmouth and now competing for the B. A. A., is out to better the mark in the shotput.

STARS IN FIELD EVENTS.

He will have plenty of opposition to push him to a record, for C. Lawlor of the Irish-American is also throwing the discus around record figures and is likely to better the mark today.

J. O. Johnstone and Harry Hawkins of the B. A. A., are the logical favorites to take the first two places in the running high jump. Herbert Kempton, Harry Worthington and P. G. Nordell, all of the B. A. A., are good performers in the running broad jump, with the latter named athlete the favorite to win.

The hammer throw, fifty-six-pound weight, javelin and discus events are all expected to be close.

Billy Meanix of the B. A. A. is the favorite in the hurdles, with High of the B. A. A. and Cummings running unattached being likely factors.

CLEAN SWEEP IN MACK GAMES AIM OF RED SOX

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

No doubt the Red Sox will make a supreme effort to make it four straight against the Athletics this afternoon. The final game of the series is carded to begin at 3 o'clock. The Sox have taken six straight from the leaders—three in Philadelphia and three here—and next week they have some more games to play with them in the Quaker City. If the Sox keep on winning there is no telling what will happen before the season ends. Carrigan is keeping his men on the jump all the time.

It is likely that Ernest Shore will go against the Mackmen this afternoon. The tall and lanky pitcher has had fine success since he joined the Red Sox two months ago. He has been hard to hit in all the games he has pitched and the two losses charge up against him were due to no fault of his.

Maybe Connie Mack will send "Chief" Bender to the firing line in a last dying effort to win one game from the Sox.

One thing that hurts the Mackmen at this stage of the proceedings is that they are short of catchers. Lapp and Schang are on the hospital list just now and McAvoy, while a hard worker, is not in the same class with the other two.

Today's game will be the last the Red Sox play at Fenway Park until September 30. They go to New York, Philadelphia and Washington next week and start West after the series in the Capitol City.

Judges Named for Hibernian Sports

The following have been invited to serve as officials at the amateur athletic meet to be held in conjunction with the Hibernian field day at the Locust street grounds on Labor Day: Referee, Richard C. Ford, Second A. A. A.; starter, John J. Norton, B. B. Cabbot, G. A. C.; judges, John D. O'Neill and Elwood Hoppe, Hiems; John J. Reiley, John Halloran, Bernard Burns, Hibernian Athletic; Starter Bill Sullivan, clerk of course, Edward Ward, Hibernian; assistant clerks of course, John F. Kelly, Hibernian, and William Flynn, Quaker City; announcer, Thomas Kane; judges at finish, Jack Dark and Frank Sheridan, scorers, William Lynch, William Mahon and Joseph Mahon; James McCarthy, auctioneer, Charles McCarthy, timekeepers, Brian Boru and Hoosier Josephs, Hibernian.

Scotch Games on Labor Day Card

The twenty-fifth consecutive union picnic and games of the Associated Caledonian Clubs of Greater Boston will be held in Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, on Labor Day.

Past Royal Chief Walter Scott of New York, who has given prizes to the use of $1,000, will also be present.

A list of sports opened to the world and athletic events, sanctioned by the A. A. U., will be held.

Exeter Squad to Get Going September 16

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 5.—Phillips Exeter football candidates will have their first session Sept. 16, when Coach "Ted" Jones will then call out what material he has on hand at the beginning of the school year.

Jones has been busy at Exeter now for over a week and has kept close watch of the applicants for admission to the institution, but he says "there is nothing in sight."

Marden Wins Title.

Harold H. Marden defeated Leonard F. Leighton, 6—3, 6—2, 6—1, in the finals of Class A of the annual men's championship singles tournament, at the Arlington Heights Tennis Club.

Baby Marathon for the Brockton C. L. U.

A five-mile "baby marathon" will be a feature of the annual picnic of the Brockton Central Labor Union Monday. The field day will be held on the Colonial League ball park, and the five-mile run will be through the city, finishing on the ball field, which will be circled once. This race and the other field and track events have been sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. A. U.

CHAMPION RACE.

Fifty - mile Motor - Paced Race—Moran, Wiley, Carman, Mitten, Walthour.

Two-mile Amateur Handicap.

Australian Pursuit Race for Professionals.

Five-mile Open for Amateurs.

One-mile Professional.

Champion George Wiley is the favorite in the national middle-distance motor paced championship over the fifty-mile route at the Revere Cycle Track tonight. Clarence Carman, Bobby Walthour, Jimmy Moran and Worth Mitten are the other starters in this event and a hard, close race is looked for.

While Wiley is a slight favorite the general run of "fans" feel that any of the others in the event has as much chance of landing the big prize as the Syracuse flyer.

Every man is fit and a fast performance the greatest struggle for supremacy ever staged at the Beach saucer is on. Moran has pulled down two championships while Walthour has broken the fifty-mile record, the distance over which tonight's race will be ridden.

Wiley's form at Revere last Tuesday night showed him to be in the best shape of his career. His exhibition with very little competition was really remarkable. Mitten is being boomed as the "dark horse" and the man who is going to cause all the trouble, while Carman only recently broke the one-hour record.

Besides the title, a diamond studded gold medal, handsomely engraved, will go to the winner.

The regular list of amateur and professional events will complete the card.

Aylwards to Hold Swimming Meet

The Aylward Swimming Club of Charlestown has one great preparation for its meet to be held at Dewey Beach Labor Day. Among those who will take part are, R. F. THE ADVENTURES OF A TOMBOY

IF you want some fun, Miss Kitty," grinned Broncho Pete, "jump on a gentle hoss, and ride over to see me break the 'Demon.'"

Kitty picked out a little horse with a mild face, saying, "I think I can ride you without a saddle." But the minute she was on he reared.

The horse leaped, bucked and whirled, and Kit felt like the map of Europe. "If anyone asked my opinion, I would say that this animal would make a very good pinwheel, but I'm still on deck," she chuckled.

"Excuse my delay," she called to Broncho Pete, as she rode up. "I'm ready to watch you break the 'Demon.'" "Jumping Jehosophat!" yelled Pete, "that's the 'Demon' you're on! You didn't know it, but he's the fellow."

John Hale Finds Tom Injured and Tries to Persuade Constance to Explain

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XLV.

JOHN HALE'S automobile throbbed its way along the New York road. The owner sat in the tonneau, besieged by a host of unpleasant imaginings and gloomy conjectures. He was tormented by thoughts of Constance's indiscretion and ingratitude, of his daughter's future, of the gossiping proclivities of his neighbors, of the absurdity of his decision to take this route. He was ashamed already of the sharp stab of fear that had moved him to tell his chauffeur to drive to the Stony Brook bridge. Just because the village policeman had spoken of an automobile accident he, John Hale, supposed to be a sane, clear-headed individual, had rushed off on another wild goose chase!

With a movement of impatience at his own vacillation, he leaned forward to speak to his chauffeur, then uttered a sudden ejaculation of warning and lurched heavily to one side of the seat as Robert threw on the brakes and brought the car to a sliding standstill. Just ahead, the slim form of a woman stood erect in the glare of the lights. The brilliancy hid from her sight the faces of the occupants of the car, but she hurried forward, and spoke to them before she saw them.

"If you please," she gasped, "some one help me! There's a man here who has been terribly hurt. You must carry him to a doctor at once. Hurry, please!"

"Constance!" John Hale exclaimed as he recognized the speaker. "What are you doing here?"

Suspicion and anger mingled with astonishment in his tones, but the girl took no heed of them. Her fear and agitation were too great for her to notice her uncle's manner or to wonder at his presence here.

"Oh, I'm glad it is you," she said. "I've been trying to lift Tom, but I can't. He had an accident and he badly hurt. Uncle, I'm afraid—"

CONSTANCE UPBRAIDED

But her uncle interrupted her angrily. Ralph's insinuations returned to him again, and he spoke harshly. "And you," he said, "what are you doing here? How dare you bring us as you did! Your poor aunt is—"

The girl threw out her arm to check him. There was a strange abandonment in the gesture.

"For Constance's sake," burst forth, "don't stop to talk! Tom may be dying. I tell you—dying! What do it matter—what does anything else matter now! Only help him. He hasn't done anything to hurt you! Robert!" she turned to the chauffeur almost passionately as she saw her uncle hesitate, "Robert, come and help me get him into the car! We may be killing him by standing here talking!"

Without a glance at his employer the chauffeur leaped from his seat and ran with the girl down into the gully from which the red tail-light of a car glared balefully. Clambering down after the pair, Mr. Hale heard the splashing of water and the short, difficult breathing of one struggling with a heavy weight. Yet he was far too dazed to offer to help the man when, a minute later, he staggered up into the stream of white light that flowed from the lamps, dragging, rather than lifting, a dark, limp form.

"Good Lord!" Mr. Hale gasped as he caught sight of the ghastly face, spattered and streaked with blood.

"Help me a hand here please sir!" the chauffeur ordered.

Without a word the master helped his employe as, directed by Constance, he lifted the senseless weight into the car.

"Put him in the tonneau, Robert," Constance commanded. "Careful! There—put his head on this cushion. That's right! Uncle, you sit in front, please. I'll sit here and hold him. Drive to Dr. Sheffield's, Robert, as fast as you can."

And this was the creature who, nervous and shaken, had faced him in his library but a few short hours ago!

John Hale marveled. What mighty emotion had worked this change in her? Once during the drive back to Homewood avenue the elderly man turned to speak to his niece, but the dim impression that he received of the slender girl clinging to the limp figure that swayed and jerked with the motion of the car silenced him. A feeling of wondering compassion was conquering him in spite of his puzzled disapproval of his niece's actions.

Yet he spoke gruffly when the car stopped at Dr. Sheffield's house.

"Here, Constance," he said, "Robert and I will lift Tom. Go on ahead and see if the doctor is in."

ASK WHAT IT MEANS

When the wounded man had been carried into the physician's inner office and Constance and her uncle were seated in the waiting room, listening to the muffled sounds on the other side of the closed folding doors, John Hale began asking a question.

"Constance," he ventured, "will you try to tell me what this means?"

His niece sat opposite him, pale and immobile. She did not turn her head when he spoke, but watched the closed doors with fixed intentness. When she answered her voice was monotonous and low.

"Please don't talk to me now, uncle," she said. "I can't argue or explain yet. If I try to I—I can't stand it!"

She shuddered and her voice broke. Yet a moment later she had regained her self control and once more watched silently the closed doors.

After what seemed an interminable period the physician entered the room.

"The patient is very badly hurt," he announced gravely, in response to the question in the eyes of uncle and niece. "Just how badly I do not know certainly yet. A collarbone is broken, there is a bad scalp wound and a slight concussion. Whether he is injured internally or not I cannot say until I have had a consultation. There is also a heavy welt right across the bridge of the nose. Just below the eyes. I don't understand how he got that. His face may have struck the windshield when the car was ditched, but that would have left a bruise—at least I should think so—and not a mark like this.

"One would actually think he had been lashed straight across the face with a whip. But of course that is not possible. Still, the fact remains that the mark is a welt—not a bruise. I confess that I do not understand it!"

"Oh, no, only half, Marie. The other half wholesale it."

Holding up a globe before a bright little boy in school, the teacher asked what country is opposite to us on the globe.

"I don't know, ma'am," was the reply.

"Well, now," pursued the teacher, "if I were to bore a hole through the earth and you were to go in at this end, where would you come out?"

"Out of the hole," replied the pupil, with an air of triumph.

Neolithic Man as a Miner

"HE KNEW AS WELL AS THE MODERN MAN HOW TO DRIVE A SHAFT, BUT HE DUG FOR WEAPONS."

Shafts dug near Mons, Belgium, by prehistoric man and recently discovered. In these diggings our sages tors sought flint to make arrow heads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

PREHISTORIC man is continually becoming plainer to our eyes as science clears away the mists of early time, and the more we see of him the more we find to admire in his achievements.

Recently extensive explorations have been undertaken of the mines that were dug by men of the Neolithic age at Spiennes, not far from the present city of Mons, in Belgium.

Mines! What had prehistoric man to do with mining? What was he digging for?

Digging for that which for him was as valuable and as indispensable as iron is for us—flint. He knew nothing of metals, but he had to have spear and arrow heads for himself, kitchen knives for his wife, and a variety of working tools to keep the whole family from mischief, and he made these things out of flint.

The first makers of flint tools and weapons were very crude craftsmen, and they took their raw material wherever they could find it—a chunk of flint picked up here or there served their purposes. But early man was not long in demonstrating that he was no slave of mere instinct, like bees and ants and other animals which know no progress, and do the same things in the same way for a million years. His intelligence showed him that he could improve upon himself and upon nature by setting his mind, his invention at work.

As his tools became finer in quality and finish he needed better materials to work with, and he set out to find them. Some great flood, perhaps, cutting deep into the chalky soil, showed him that far beneath the surface there were layers of flint nodules much superior in quality to those that he had hitherto used. He felt that he must have that better kind of flint, cost what it would, and so he became a miner.

The explorations to which I have referred show that certainly hundreds, and probably thousands, of deep mine-wells were dug by Neolithic men in the chalky plateau at Spiennes in order to reach deposits of specially fine flint existing at a depth of fifty feet beneath the surface of the ground.

There was plenty of fairly good flint above, but these workmen were becoming very particular in their judgment of the material that they used. They wanted tools and weapons that would take and keep an edge and that would not crumble in an emergency. In those days, just as truly as today, the best weapon won the battle, the best knife struck deepest.

You can see in the photograph how ingeniously the men of that time dug their mines. They knew as well as the coal miners of Pennsylvania how to support the roofs of their galleries. The force of gravitation was no secret to them, although so many thousands of years were to elapse before, out of their race, should arise a Newton to demonstrate that the same force which brought an unsupported vault down upon the heads of reckless miners for flint took hold on the moon and held her a prisoner to the earth.

Around the openings of the mines, at the surface, indications are found of the existence of the workshops of the artificers in flint. There, too, as well as in the abandoned mines, are found many flint picks, whose wooden handles decayed and turned to impalpable dust many centuries before Rome was founded. It was with such implements that this vast system of mines and galleries was excavated, and by those early, simple men, whom we are accustomed to regard as far below even the savages of today.

But they possessed the virtue of perseverance. They knew what hard unceasing work meant. Measured by the effort required to get it, their flint was as precious as our gold.

"If you would appreciate the industry of these Neolithic men," says one of the investigators of their work, "take one of those flint picks, just as it dropped from their hands, fasten a handle to it, and then go to work and dig a well fifty feet deep and galleries hundreds of feet long, and see how long it will take you."

Those were, indeed, the days of hard work; the days when man was finding his true worth, and when the value of labor was measured not by hours but by results.

Do You Know That—

Mr. F. G. Browne of Melbourne, Australia, has invented an ingenious machine for cleaning the hulls of ships below the water line. In this contrivance a waterweight dynamo drives a revolving brush that is held firmly against the hull of the ship by a small propeller. After the machine has been lowered by a crane from a small boat alongside the steamer the end that holds the rapidly revolving brush is worked up and down the sides of the vessel. It is stated that the machine can clean an eight-thousand-ton steamer in six or seven hours.

Grand-Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia, the brother of the Kaiser, who was the first royal airman, and learned to fly when he was forty-nine, has become the first royal cinematograph operator. The prince took a camera from a professional operator at his castle at Kiel for his trip to South America, and he is making his own film records. The prince is already a cyclist, motorist, golfer and boxer.

At the Buenos Aires postoffice the X-rays have been successfully employed to detect the presence of smuggled articles in mail packets. In this manner watches, rings, chains and other dutiable articles have been discovered hidden in apparently innocent parcels.

A wire-haired terrier dog, Ruby Dassler, which only about a year ago was purchased by the landlord of an English public house for £25, has now been purchased by Fred. W. Quintard of New York for close upon $2,000.

Referring to the recent announcement in the French papers that the wife of a Paris pastrycook has given birth to her twenty-first child, the German papers record that this figure is beaten in Berlin, where one man has twenty-six children. How to Look Less Than Your Age

There are three golden rules that every woman who would ward off signs of advancing age should follow:

1. Cultivate cheerfulness. Those who understand the physiological effect of worrying, know this advice should be taken more seriously than it usually is.

2. Whenever the complexion begins to look worn or withered, use ordinary unscented wax (a cake of Ivory Soap slightly like cold cream, massaged into the skin with warm water. This gradually absorbs the thin film of surface skin, revealing the fresh, clear complexion underneath. An ounce of the wax obtainable at any drug store, is enough to rejuvenate the complexion.

3. When the telltale wrinkles appear, or those over a tiny fat cushion to a sagging or puckered muscle, I am, disgusted to be so of fifty, I use massage. This has a remarkable effect in "ironing out" and smoothing out the skin.

Realities in the Reel World

A FEW ODD HAPPENINGS ABOUT THE MOVING PICTURE PEOPLE.

WELL-BEHAVED convicts in the State prison at Deer Lodge, Mont., are regaled with a "movie" show every week. For any minor infraction of the prison rules a convict is fined "two picture shows," and the Governor affirms that discipline has improved immensely since the apparatus was installed. The convicts will suffer any punishment rather than miss their picture show.

An operator just returned to London from a fourteen months' trip to Canada and Jamaica has had a store of adventure sufficient to last any ordinary man a lifetime. He has been shipwrecked, nearly frozen to death in the Canadian Rockies, and lost in the forest. But this isn't all. "During my five months' stay in Jamaica," he says, "I managed to get malarial fever and was very badly stung by a six inch scorpion."

Chatting about how critical the picture public is becoming, a well-known actress recently said: "I remember a scene in which one of the characters had died and was stretched out on a couch, while, as her grieving daughter, I wept bitterly over her body. I was scheduled to cross her arms, and had got the left one in place all right, when the corpse, becoming rather restless and thinking I was slow about it, lifted the other one into place herself. We thought it would pass unnoticed on the screen. I was in a theatre during the showing of the film, and when the dead body accommodatingly moved its own arm the audience broke into a roar of laughter.

Comparative Happiness.

His hair was long and his eyes of the watery blue variety. He sat on the grassy bank at the side of the road smiting his shapeless head with a formidable looking mallet. Tears chased down his cheeks, bumps like anthills stood out on his skull.

"What do you do that for?" asked a wondering passerby. "Surely it must hurt terribly?"

"Of course it hurts!" answered the philosopher. "But see how jolly life seems when I leave off."

The Crepe Nuisance

An Answer to a Young Man Whose Mother Wants to Wear Mourning Garb at His Wedding.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A YOUNG man writes that he is about to be married; his mother, who has met with a recent bereavement, wishes to wear her mourning garb at the wedding. He wants to know if such attire is proper.

By all that is meanly, No! If there is one occasion in life when every intrusion of grief, every mark of woe, every tear, every sigh, every frown, every semblance of unhappiness or troubled prediction should be forbidden, it is on the wedding day. Though one may, like the lugubrious Pleasant Riderhood, in "Our Mutual Friend," see in a wedding only two people taking out a license to quarrel and fight; though one may, through personal experience, deem single life more blessed; or, being single, envy those at the altar; or though one may have suffered a recent bereavement, one should not, under any or all circumstances, show by look or garb anything but felicitous condition at a wedding.

It is the most important day in the lives of at least two people. Whatever their troubles, sorrows and disappointments in the past, they stand at the threshold of a new opportunity for joy. They are beginning life all over again, and under the happiest of all conditions, for Love presides.

FORGET THEM

If there have been sorrows every one present should forget them. If the marriage means loneliness and a narrowed circle in two homes, that fact should be resolutely put out of mind. Only one sentiment should prevail, and that sentiment should be expressed in smiles and good wishes and happy thoughts. For two are starting on a strange and long journey all alone, and it means much to them to start off with their happiness unmarred by a last glimpse of tear-stained eyes, garments of sombre attire or faces distorted with grief.

If mourning should be worn at all is a question that never has been settled. Against every argument that the trappings of woe are depressing and therefore unhealthful, and mean nothing to the dead, there arises a protest from those in black that to wear anything else is a mark of disrespect to those who are gone.

MORE IMPORTANT

It is more important to show respect for the living by refusing to impose marks of bereavement on the public; but the advocates of this custom refuse to pay heed to the good of those who survive. Fashion demands crepe, so they swathe themselves in this most expensive attire at a time when sickness and death have already made such exhaustive demands on the purse that simple consideration for the living should forbid further inroads.

If one wears mourning or not is one's privilege, but it is never one's privilege to wear such marks of woe at a wedding. If one is too selfish to lay aside such trappings for the sake of others, then one should stay at home. If grief is to be nursed, home is the place to nurse it. Under no conditions should it be trotted out and exhibited at a wedding.

A Good Reason

A couple of boys stood watching a fractious horse snort its disapproval of an approaching motor car.

"What makes a horse do that when he sees a motor car?" asked one.

The other replied, "It's this way. Horses is used to see other horses pull carts, and they don't know what to think of carts going along without a horse. If you saw a pair of trousers walking down the street without a man in them you'd be scared, too."

COUNTRY RESPONDS TO OPTIMISM

By W. H. ROSS.
Fiscal Editor.

Financial sentiment in this country echoes the statement made in Washington after the Clearing House conference. Then it was said: "A spirit of optimism prevailed throughout the whole meeting. The war foreign exchange has declined in strong evidence that international credits will soon be restored and that commercial and industrial interests of this country have come through the first tempestuous days splendidly strong. The big rise in wheat prices at Chicago was also due in no small measure to the almost wholly speculative but the export demand for grain is enormous.

The New York bank statement for last week is the expected one, showing a deficit of $37,125,300, an increase of $17,750,300 for the week. Loans have increased $9,787,000 and specie decreased $1,848,000; legal tenders $1,227,000 and net deposits $16,600,000. There is an increase of $11,726,000 in circulation.

FIRST CONFERENCE MOVE.

The first move of the conference at Washington began with bankers and government officials was to authorize the appointment of a committee to formulate, after exhaustive investigation, a plan to relieve the domestic and foreign exchange situation. As regards the situation abroad, which must be exported to settle this country's obligations to Europe, a statement was issued to the effect that the conference proceedings says the underwriting of $135,000,000 of bonds being considered by a banking syndicate. After the meeting it was announced that the Federal Reserve Board intends to organize and open reserve banks as soon as possible, and that members of it were convinced that banking interests stand ready to co-operate with it to the fullest extent. How much Americans owe Europeans was not revealed, but an official statement on that subject says a careful inquiry has been made.

$135,000,000 FOR NEW YORK.

Another important development was the public spirited decision by New York bankers to form a syndicate to raise $100,000,000 for a short term loan at 6 per cent, to liquidate the indebtedness of the city of New York in Europe, while amounts to about $50,000,000 additional matures this year. This loan will render, it is believed, unnecessary for this country to ship a large amount of gold abroad, as it is stated, "when England sees that we have the gold funds she will not be so insistent in demanding the payment of gold in balances." At 6 per cent. New York will pay a lower rate of interest on this loan than it has been paying.

WANTS CONGRESS TO AID.

The chief argument against reopening stock exchanges is that European would liquidate holdings of American stocks to such extent that would cause a greater slump in values than bankers would care to contemplate. Frank A. Agueo of the New York Consolidated Exchange, which decided this week to reopen, suggests that Congress pass an emergency act authorizing the issue by the United States government of treasury notes not to exceed $5,000,000 in amount to absorb European liquidation of American State, municipal and railway dividend and interest paying stocks and bonds. He says if this is done a stupendous volume of securities would be withdrawn from our market and no longer menace it. "The stock exchanges," he says, "could open each day after the securities was effected, and all avenues of trade would hum with activity."

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

One day's sales of flour to foreigners at Minneapolis totalled 1000,000 barrels.

September wheat advanced five points to 91.39 at the New York Produce Exchange yesterday, breaking even for all-time record. More than 500,000 bushels of oats were sold overnight for the account of the British government.

The state railways of Victoria, Australia, are sought in this country bids for 30,000 tons of steel rails.

Lorimer settlements, it is said, has been decided must be completed by October 29, should definitely determine the sort of bonds which are to be sold before British exchanges closed and which are awaiting allotment to New York.

HOW TO HELP IN THE GOOD WORK OF RED CROSS

All subscriptions toward the war relief fund should be sent to Gardiner M. Lane, treasurer for Massachusetts, No. 44 State street, Boston.

All individuals or societies wishing to sew for the sick and wounded may obtain directions from Mrs. John Balch, Public Interest League, No. 655 Boylston street, Boston.

Although on many occasions second-hand clothing and supplies are valuable, in this emergency everything must be entirely new.

For any other general information apply to Miss Louisa P. Loring, emergency secretary for Massachusetts, Pride's Crossing, Mass.

The Red Cross work stands for absolute neutrality.

WILSON AIDS REGISTRY OF FOREIGN SHIPS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—President Wilson today issued an executive order waiving certain provisions of the navigation laws so as to facilitate the registration of foreign-built ships under the American flag.

The provisions regarding measurement, survey and inspection are suspended for two years. The clause requiring watch officers to be American citizens is suspended for seven years and, new officials can be appointed to the ships within two years without regard to their citizenship. The order states:

"In pursuance of the authority conferred upon the President of the United States by Section 2 of the act approved August 18, 1914, entitled, 'An act to provide for the admission of foreign-built ships to American registry and for other purposes,' it is hereby ordered:

"1—That the provisions of the law prescribing that the vessels of vessels of the United States registered for foreign trade shall be citizens of the United States, or persons who have resided so far and for such length of time as is required by law, and that all foreign-built ships which shall be admitted to United States registry for foreign trade and that the watch officers employed thereon, without regard to citizenship, for seven years from this date, and such watch officers shall be eligible for promotion. Any vacancy occurring among such watch officers within the said period of this date may be filled without regard to citizenship, but any vacancies which may occur thereafter shall be filled by watch officers who are citizens of the United States.

"2—That all the provisions of the law requiring survey, inspection and measurement of vessels of the United States of foreign-built ships admitted to United States registry under said act are hereby suspended for two years from this date."

SPECULATORS DRIVE PRICES OF FOOD HIGHER

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The most important foodstuffs were advanced another five per cent. here today. The total advances since August 1, when the European war began, is forcing New Yorkers to pay an extra $300,000 weekly for its food. This means $42,000,000 a year, at the present rate. More advances are predicted.

The boost in prices during the past few weeks has been due to the action of speculators who are attempting to corner as much of the food supply as possible. They are storing it away in the hope of getting even higher prices later on.

Flour rose 10 cents a barrel today, making a total addition of 50 cents a barrel during the week. Rice, sugar and all grades of meat were boosted during the week, the average ranging between 2 and 10 per cent., while all other foodstuffs are now selling at prices well above those of last Saturday.

SURVIVORS OF ARCTIC PARTY TELL TRAGEDY

PETROGRAD (formerly St. Petersburg), Sept. 5.—Further details of the tragic experiences of the ill-fated Brousiloff Arctic expedition have been received here today from Archangel. Survivors of the expeditions who have arrived at Archangel furnished them. M. Pavloff, a geologist, and M. Pinegrin, an artist, who accompanied the expedition, sickened while on Hooker Island, in the Franz Josef land group, where the arrived last September. Lieutenant Sedoff died on March 5, while crossing the strait between Franz Josef Land and Rudolf Island, the body being buried on the island.

Eleven members of the expedition left their ship, the Stanna, after a terrible voyage over the Kara sea.

Five landed on Wiche Island. Two more were lost during a storm. The survivors reached Cape Flora on August 1 and were rescued the next day.

Captain Brousiloff remained on board the Stanna with twelve companions, expecting the vessel to be crushed by the current by the Franz route to North Spitsbergen. He has provisions for a year and hopes to reach the South safely.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON SEPTEMBER 5, 1914

BOSTON AMERICAN
10 AND 12 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, SEPT. 5, 1914.

Let Us Have Peace

THERE is no reason for the American people to express or entertain partisan sentiments in regard to this great conflict now raging in Europe.

We as a people deplore the war. We condemn the monarchical systems, the imperial policies, the mediaeval traditions, the aggression of States and the arrogance of kings which are responsible for this inexcusable destruction of our fellow human beings, this unpardonable assault upon the foundations of our social system and of our civilization.

We sympathize most deeply with the various peoples, our friends and brothers in humanity, who are compelled by the force of events which they could not foresee and circumstances which they could not control to take brave but bloody part in the war.

Sympathy with our fellows in distress and disaster is our duty, but not our full duty. It must be within the power of this great nation, which all the combatants respect and whose good opinion all value, to effectively intervene in some legitimate way to prevent the continuance of this cruel and calamitous war.

The nations of Europe must already have reached a point where they realize, more than they possibly could have realized before the event, the extent of the destruction and disaster which they are inflicting and inviting.

Europe is committing hari-kari on the doorsteps of Asia.

The civilized nations of Europe are destroying each other and the civilization which they have laboriously constructed through centuries.

Germany and Austria stand and have stood for ages as the first line of Europe's defence against the invading hordes of Asia.

France and Belgium and Italy are Europe's second line of defence, and England is its mighty defense at sea.

There is no rightful reason for internecine conflict among the defenders of Europe. They should present a united front to external dangers, and exercise their combined power against the threat of Asiatic invasion.

What good will it do England and France and Belgium to weaken Germany and Austria, and thereby weaken their first and chief protection against the invading hordes of Asia?

What good will it do Germany and Austria to weaken France and Belgium and England, whose aid and whose utmost strength they may at any time need to support themselves in their mighty task of repelling Oriental assault?

Why should Europe decimate its forces and destroy its own power, when at any time its whole force and its full power and its united effort may be needed in a supreme struggle to rescue the civilization of Europe from submersion in an overwhelming flood of barbarism?

"Let us have peace," and let this great American nation exercise its power and influence in behalf of humanity and human progress.

Furthermore, America is almost as much concerned as Europe in the menace of Asia. We do not come into immediate contact with it in the East as the countries of Europe do, but we are coming into closer and closer contact and eventual and inevitable conflict with it on our West.

For reasons of selfish interest as well as of human interest, therefore, it is America's duty to exert its utmost influence to conserve and unite under the banners of peace and progress the forces of civilization.

Let us raise our voice so loudly, and exercise our influence so strongly, that Europe will be compelled to stop for a moment and to listen to the voice of reason, to the appeal of humanity, to consider for a moment not merely our interests but their own interests, the interests of all civilization, the best interests of the whole human race.

Peace upon terms honorable to all can be secured, and the wealth and the power and the legions of Europe preserved and reserved for a greater purpose, not for the destruction of civilization, but for its sure protection in the crisis to come.

The Cash Value of Love

By DOROTHY DIX

WHAT is the cash value of love?

So far the only attempts that have ever been made to give love a market rating have been in breach of promise suits where forsaken damsels have placed the damage to their affections at sums that ranged all the way from $100 to $100,000. That these estimates of the intrinsic worth of affection have been considered excessive, and have been liberally scaled down by the juries, is not to be considered as constituting a standard of value. Most of us are inclined to be cynical regarding the break in a heart that can be plastered up, and made as good as whole by the application of a few greenbacks.

Yet, for all that love is not listed among the negotiable securities on the Stock Exchange, and there is no Cupid Consolidated, or Mutual Affection, preferred, or Guaranteed Union Devotion at whose quotation we may glance in the morning over our coffee, love still has an actual value, and is quite as valuable an asset as anything in our strong boxes.

Not Wholly Sentiment

Nor does this refer wholly to any sentimental consideration. It is a cold, hard, business proposition that the ability to win love is just as much a factor in any one's success in the world as is the ability to earn money.

Who are the people that we help, that we lend money to, and whose credit we boost into success? The worthy? The needy? Not at all. It is the people we like.

Who are the ones we shoulder into success? The especially gifted? The unusually fit? Not a bit of it. It is the people we like. Genius allied to an unpleasing personality still starves in garrets, while agreeable mediocrity has golden opportunities thrown in its way.

All of us do things for people because we are fond of them that we would not do for them because it was their due to save their lives.

The most forcible illustration, however, that the world affords of the real cash value of love is to be found in the domestic relationship. Nobody ever appraises a man's love for his wife as a tangible asset, yet in reality the worth of a genuine case of affection for his wife runs the capital on which any man is doing business up $50,000 a year.

If he is violently in love with her this figure may be safely doubled, while if he thinks she is the only woman in the world, and that nothing is good enough for her, he has practically unlimited financial resources. This is not an exaggerated statement. "Love hath made this thing a man," said Kipling of a little whimpering half breed, who turned heroic in a moment of trial for the sake of a woman. Love has also turned many a poor man into a millionaire. It is a power so great that it is genius in itself.

Just because he wants to clothe some woman he loves in silks and jewels makes many a naturally indolent man into a hustler. The knowledge that a woman believes in him, and expects him to succeed, nerves a man up to do the very best that is in him, just as the knowledge that his wife is indifferent to him, and will sue him, and twit him with his failures, saps energies and paralyzes his courage.

A quiet, peaceful, happy home is such an element in a man's success, a tender, affectionate, loving wife is such an inspiration to him, that it is a wonder that even selfish women, who care for only what they can get out of their husbands, have not sense enough to see that in failing to give a man any appreciation they are literally starving to death the goose that lays the golden egg.

A cheerful, loving wife is a mascot. A fretful, unloving wife is a hoodoo, and thus it happens that love wins out, and draws down the prize in money as well as in domestic peace and happiness.

So far as women are concerned, men will find that it is also money in their pockets to love their wives, and keep their wives in love with them. It is a cynical marital joke that the man, who quarrels with his wife has to square himself by means of fine raiment and imported millinery. More than this, there is no doubt that when women are unhappy they relieve their feelings by extravagance, as miserable men do theirs by drink.

As long as a woman believes in a husband's affection she can be happy in a log cabin, or a two by four flat, and it is because love flies so often out of the window that so much money has to come in by the door. As long as a man tells his wife that she is the most beautiful woman in the world in his eyes she will wear last year's clothes without one word of repining.

This Makes for Economy

As long as a man takes any interest in holding his wife's hand she will gladly work it to the bone for him, and, this being the case, it is a wonder that the sex that prides itself on its financial sagacity has never thought it worth while to bestow more kisses and compliments and less coin on its wife. It would make for economy.

Perhaps when we come to regard love as a tangible asset, instead of a dream, we shall be less careless about losing or mislaying it. There would be fewer divorces if the average husband and wife were as careful of each other's affections as they are of a five dollar bill.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The Boston Elevated Railway carries half as many passengers annually as the combined steam railways of the United States? The figures are approximately 500,000,000, as against 1,000,000,000.

The Most Important Event in the World Today—

WHAT IS IT?

If you were asked what is the most important event in the world today, what would you say?

The European war?

The election of a new Catholic Pope?

The latest scientific discovery?

Some great medical achievement?

All of these, to be sure, may have tremendous bearing on the future of humanity.

A noted medic's discoveries about a gland in the brain of man and beast that may enable science to ABOLISH YOUTH and RAPIDLY to turn children into men, chicks into chickens, calves into cows, to sate war's appetite for meat and men, eventually may be more important to mankind that the stupendous battles now being fought in Europe—which will be but history in a single generation.

The manner in which Pope Benedict XV. in Rome wields his wide influence for PEACE may have a more important effect on the generations to come than the annihilation of a great army today.

Yet casually speaking, most anyone might say the European war is the MOST IMPORTANT EVENT IN THE WORLD TODAY.

Well, WE don't know.

But we DO know that ALL THREE OF THESE EVENTS ARE IMPORTANT, and we feel that EVERYBODY will want to READ ABOUT THEM.

Wherefore, tomorrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN will have a page devoted to a study of the new Pope Benedict—his life, his career, his personality, what he looks like, and above all the GREAT PROBLEM WHICH CONFRONTS HIM.

As to WAR: In addition to the news of the day from the Sunday AMERICAN'S great European corps of correspondents and famous writers, there will be amazing stories of the adventures of Greater Boston people who were UNDER FIRE AT THE FRONT and who were ARRESTED AS SPIES.

A striking picture and word portrait will be printed of the "'Man of the Hour" in France, GENERAL PAUL PAU, the one armed hero upon whom the nation pins its tottering hopes.

A startling article by a German officer gives details of how Germany was prepared for this campaign three years ago and was ready to strike at a minute's notice.

Two pages will be devoted to showing how the latest MACHINES OF DEATH have reduced war to the SCIENCE OF MURDER IN MASS BY EXACT MATHEMATICS. This great exclusive feature describes the new tactics of the battlefield and how they were put in operation during the recent siege of the Liege forts in Belgium. It explains the monstrous steel cupolas from which armies are raked with bullet and shell; mines that rise and scatter death wholesale; self sighting guns that wipe square miles clean of life.

For your further entertainment, the Sunday AMERICAN'S magazine section will contain a score or more of great exclusive features.

Lest the great events and problems of the day become oppressive, we may turn to the September number of the AMERICAN'S Monthly Fiction Magazine.

It is a remarkably interesting publication—the equal of any fiction magazine published. Note the following:

A New Novel by Jack London, with a Tremendous Idea Never Before Used in Fiction.

"The Star Rover," by Jack London, is the headliner in the AMERICAN'S great fiction magazine, given FREE with every copy of tomorrow's Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

It is a startling novel, written about a TREMENDOUS IDEA.

It considers the influence upon a personality of previous incarnations in other worlds.

Mr. London's hero develops this idea with startling vividness.

The story will startle and fascinate you. You will want to read it from the start. Don't neglect it.

In the same number are two other great fiction stories by famous writers.

In "The Serious Dilemma of Mr. Hogge," by E. Phillips Oppenheim, the love of Algernon Knox for Miss de Hagon reaches its climax, and in the telling of the story Mr. Oppenheim writes a most baffling tale of intrigue of Monte Carlo at its gayest.

Leonard Merrick's "The Woman in the Book," is another of his delightful stories of French Bohemia. Even more than his story in the last month's magazine does this illustrate his remarkable narrative skill. You will laugh heartily at the poet, Tricotrin, in his disillusionment, but you will also sympathize deeply with him.

And then in lighter vein comes the Sunday AMERICAN'S incomparable comic section in which—

The Katzenjammer Kids are little rascals. Everybody has got to agree on THAT.

And tomorrow they pull off one of their cleverest skits. Note the picture closely:

"Their Only Child" does an outdoor act down at the beach:

And the scars Mr. Perkins got when he saw the baby carriage floating down stream was a good one. So was the spanking Little Jimmy got. That is, good or bad, according to the viewpoint.

Along come Tige and the mischievous youngster, from the pen of Outcault, the originator of Buster Brown. The picture may give you the action of the act.

End of the column. See tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN for the Rest.
